TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION.

There has been and there continues to be a growing tendency to centralization in trade and in commerce in general which is becoming noticeable to every one who reads, or who observes the work there is going forward to centralize the means used for distribution of commodities.

A like tendency continues to centralize the means of production of commodities that enter into the necessities of life under our civilization. The out-come of the tendency, which is speedily crystallizing into a fact is a grave matter for the consideration of the people as they are and will be directly affected by the subject. Centralization is and will be to their benefit, or to their disadvantage.

Will centralization be for the benefit of the people, or will it be to their injury is a problem they will have to solve in a practical way in the near future as the work is going forward in almost all departments where it is possible to secure it. There are many questions that will come to the front through the work of centralization which are at this time so obscure that they are not observable without the aid of a magnifying glass, they largely exist in the imagination as facts, that will have to be disposed of because they are included in any solution of the main problem.

These questions will if necessary arise out of the main question in its progress to a solution, but they are not at this time before the public in a form that demands notice as they are parts of the main question that will take distinct form as discussion goes forward on the main issue before the people. Will centralization benefit the people or will it injure them is truly the form the problem is in at present.

There is not any part of the people in the United States who have before them so many facts that demonstrate to them that centralization will injure the masses as the people of Nevada.

The facts have been given to us while we were protesting against their application and they are open for us in any manner that may be to our future advantage. Education is valuable only when it is made practical.

The more obscure matters that will appear in a solution of the main question do not require notice at the beginning of a discussion upon the main question. There are many problems to be disposed of that stand forth as present in bold relief against a background which aids to form the most interesting picture there has been given to the people for their examination since the doings of men have been given to the world in picture form.

One among the problems in chief that will be presented for solution is the coming contest upon centralization will be taxation without representation.

The purpose of centralization is to create a monopoly which will abolish competition. When abolition of competition is secured, as laws now are respecting interstate commerce and respecting monopolies in general, the people will be between the lower and upper millstones, while monopolies grind their grists in dollars, that flow from the hard earnings of the people. Prices will be fixed by monopolies, about which the people will not have anything to say. Remuneration will cease to take the form of compensation for service rendered, as it will be given the form of a tax levied by monopolies upon the people while they stand dumb before their shears and pay the tax demanded by an absolute power at the environment of a republic.

The first time taxation without representation was given to the world in a form not to be overlooked by the historian came from Philip de Commines in France, in the reign of Louis XI. Commines said: "There is no king or lord on earth who hath the power over and above his own property to put a single penny on his subjects without grant and consent of those who have to pay, unless by tyranny and violence."

The conditions which called forth the expression from de Commines were those of feudal times, when men were taxed and oppressed on all sides by kings and feudal lords. The difference in taxation by a monopoly in our time and by a king, or by a feudal lord, is in the manner the tax is levied, and not in the principle included in the levy.

It will be argued that the people are not required to place themselves in a position to have a tax imposed upon them by a monopoly, which will admit the tax, while the argument will exclude the levy through palliating circumstances which include no principle of right respecting the levy by a monopoly. The view of taxation without representation is just and in principle is correct, the difference at this time and in feudal times being in modified surroundings, as a result of a higher civilization.

The principle remains the same at this time as it was during the dark ages. The taxes levied by lords in feudal times were imposed in a direct manner, while the tax levied by a monopoly in our time is imposed in an indirect way, and is imposed under an excuse of service rendered, which gives to the face of the levy in words a seeming honesty it does not possess. The cruelty remains without excuse, and the excess over a just remuneration for service rendered is a forcible taking of the money and property of another without his consent, which makes the taking subject to the application of the terms, stealing or robbing, which has become a part of the business of monopolies, as much as it was a part of the business of feudal lords.

A GLANCE
AHEAD

This Wintry Weather Will Prove a Blessing in Disguise.

John Sullivan and Pat Kelly, two of the substantial ranchers of the Truckee Meadows, were comparing notes with a JOURNAL scribe yesterday on the outlook for Nevada in general and Washoe county in particular the coming season. They agreed on the following points:

Next summer will be one of the most prosperous that Western Nevada has ever known. The heavy snow fall is largely to bless for this condition of affairs. There will be many times as much water as will be needed by agriculturists and to turn the wheels of industry on the river bank.

This snow fell upon unfrozen ground and will gradually settle into the earth and cause wild grasses, flowers and shrubbery to clothe the ranges.
Feed will be plentier than any year in the past decade.

The snow will cause springs to well forth in arid places and enable prospectors to pursue their search in the desert regions in the state. Many a rich mine would never have been discovered had it not been in the proximity of a spring.

This seasonable weather will doubtless be followed by a mild spring and a use a plentiful fruit crop.

Another advantage gained from the cold and snow is their purifying effect upon the atmosphere. With high water in the streams and zero temperature of nights, there is little fear of the "summer sickness," which is the fate of most mortals when the sultry days of August come.

THE MINING
OUTLOOK

Another Communication on This Subject From Prospector
Brown.

EDITOR JOURNAL: I have not been in Reno for over two months, but will say I am greatly surprised to find the people taking so much interest in mining.

It is an assured fact that during the coming spring and summer there will be at least three or four more good paying mines opened up within a radius of twenty miles of Reno.

There has been a deal made recently with three of the leading men of money in Reno on a group of mines on the south end of Anselmo mountain, near Cold Springs, which they are going to develop at once.

There is another corporation being formed in the city of Washington on a number of claims, also near Cold Springs, which will be worked and developed in the near future.

It is learned that a number of prominent mining men are coming here this spring to inspect and probably invest in prospects around Reno.

It is almost an assured fact that the Fulton iron works will build a process for working copper ores that will excel anything that has been put in operation on this coast. They agree with a guarantee to work ores at a cost from 50 cents to $2.50 per ton. Now let us do all in our power to win the prize, for such it will be to this community.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGSA Number of Bills Introduced in Senate and Assembly-- Sixteenth Day.

THE Assembly held extended morning and afternoon sessions and more life and feeling were shown than upon any other day since the convening of the Legislature. A number of bills were introduced as well as notice given of the future introduction of several others.

A good deal of discussion was indulged in pertaining to Mr. Allen's bill providing for the reduction of salaries of Supreme Justices. Mr. Sweeney of Ormsby offered an amendment that the sum of $4500 be inserted in lieu of $4000, as the bill provides. The amendment was supported by Mr.
Platt and ably and forcibly opposed by Mr. Allen.

At the conclusion of the latter's address a motion was made to adjourn until 2 o'clock, the hour set for the consideration of the eight hour bill. Thus ended the discussion of the Allen retrenchment bill for the time being.

The Assembly reconvened at 2 o'clock.

After calling the house to order Speaker Van Duzer called Mr. Burke of Lincoln. The house was well filled by those expecting to hear a lengthy discussion on the merits of the measure. The Senate adjourned until 11 o'clock Wednesday in order to give the members an opportunity of listening to the oratory and wisdom of members of the Assembly who might take part in the debate.

Paul of White Pine offered an amendment, as follows: "Provided, that nothing in this act will prevent the working of tailings and slag dumps." The amendment was eloquently supported by Paul.

At the close of Paul's remarks, Dickenson took the floor in opposition to the amendment, supported by Coryell and Van Duzer.

Van Duzer occupied the floor for forty minutes and made an eloquent appeal to the Assembly for the passage of the same, depicting in a convincing manner the conditions of the laboring classes and the efforts of capital to grind them down to that condition of servitude from which it would be impossible for them to redeem themselves.

After short remarks by a number of others the bill was put on final passage.
The bill was passed without a dissenting vote.

The question of the amendment to Mr. Allen's bill was then taken up.
Bill passed--19 to 12.

Adjourned at 4:10.
